R. Samuel McLaughlin Research Chair on Psychosocial Aspects of Risk and Health

2003 – 2018, R.S. McLaughlin Foundation

The R. Samuel McLaughlin Research Chair on the psychosocial aspects of risk on population health focuses on innovative transdisciplinary research regarding the role of the social environment in the management of health.

Four main themes are investigated:

- the psychosocial aspects of exposure to risks
- the integration of risk perception in the psychosocial management of risks, and in particular, in risk communication strategies
- the systematic and contextual analysis of risk in the community social environment
- stress as a risk factor

The Research Chair will support research development initiatives and help consolidate fruitful research collaborations.
